Costume store chicago

Heritage Coffee is Chicago's original bicycle café, a hybrid space that fixes apartments at once and serves homemade coffee and sweet and savoury treats. With West Town Bakery, Mast Brothers chocolate bars, loose leaf teas and hot chocolate, you'll find plenty to eat and drink while you wait for your repair (or just watch the mechanics work their magic). You can also browse the sales area that brands like Brooks, Lewis Commuter, Upright Cyclist and more offer. Perhaps the last late-night meeting with online shopping left your bank account in such a creepy single-digit range. Or maybe you just love the thrill of finding fun, free stuff to do in the city. Whatever your motives, we have you. We've tracked down the best things going on in Chicago this weekend - it's just so free (or so cheap, they might as well be free). Life in the Windy City can be expensive – rent, gas and a trip to a street party or vintage market can be wiped out for the week. So, check out our list of thrifty, fun activities that you and your money-savvy friends can get completely into this Saturday and Sunday. Don't fall victim to the idea that living in Chi-town has to cost a lot of money. Free yourself! 1) Free Haircuts, Color, Blowouts and More: Free or Almost FreeWant to add hair model to your resume? Student stylists need you to refine their craft and give away hair services for next to nothing. By salonapprentice.com for the mother of hair model lists in luxury salons like Maxine's, Trio, Marianne Strokirk, Joseph Michael's, Streets of London and more. Recent offers we've found include a free long-layer trim at Maxine's on the Gold Coast (usually 60 dollars and more); a free shampoo and blowout at Art + Science in Wicker Park (usually 38 usd and more); One-process color and Blowdry for 25 dollars in the Sine Qua Non in Lakeview (usually 70 dollars); and individual eyelash extensions at the Lashe Spot in Hinsdale for 25 USD (usually 300 USD). Strike that, Groupon.Services can be time consuming because the work of Padawon needs to be constantly reviewed by a master stylist, and we admit the idea that a student comes to us with scissors and permanent dye, scary. But if it's between this and another month of visible roots – well, just think of that Rihanna moment and make an informed decision.2) West Loop Art Gallery Tour: Free! And now for the nifty part of our free swag weekend: Chicago Gallery News hosts a free art gallery tour every weekend, and this Saturday they explore the loft-like warehouses of the West Loop's unique art scene. Meet in the Gallery at the West Loop (1139 W. Fulton Market) just before 1:30 p.m..m for the tour, which is led by the owner of Galerie Barb Gazdik.At Mars Gallery, you can see a series based on Lewis Carroll's Alice in Wonderland titled Alice in Chicagoland by Peter Mars. The tour continues to Linda Warren Projects to record Tom Torluække's Ring Around The Rosie and Jeriah Hildwine's Living Dead Girls. Watching Hebru Brantley's In the series What I Made Believe at the Kasia Kay Art Projects Gallery, you impress their surroundings by announcing that Brantley's paintings capture the universal essence of the human condition. The tour ends in the Packer Schopf Gallery with a series of paintings, drawings and embroidered X-ray images (for something else). Mars Gallery, 1139 West Fulton Market (between Racine Avenue and May Street); 312-226-7808.3) Free Yoga Course: Free! After a long weekend of snaps and steaus in the city, a healthy detox is the perfect way to end the week. The Chicago School of Hot Yoga in Lincoln Park offers a free community class open to all levels on Sundays at 5:45 p.m. .m. Class is an hour and fifteen minutes and make sure to bring water, a towel and your mat (or rent one for 2 dollars). Enjoy class in the final moments – they call it savasana, let's call it on the ground with your eyes closed in pure, free bliss.4) Half Acre Brewery Tour: 10Stroll down Lincoln Ave. in Northcenter on a Saturday afternoon and you'll see a line forming on the road in front of Half Acre Brewery. It's worth waiting for a tour of a real Chicago brewery, with half an acre of pint glass and up to three full beer pours – all for just 10 dollars. The Pure Tour is open every Saturday at 1.m. and only the first 60 people are allowed, so make sure to secure a place in time. The brewery is a must, and seasonal brewing is always in the making – currently an Indian red ale called Ginger Twin. Bonus: Half Acre will offer a 10 percent discount to anyone who buys this brew with God-given red hair or is accompanied by an identical twin.5) Tulip Mania and an Urban Gardening Festival at The Garfield Park Conservatory: Free! Every year, all the beautiful tulips, the Michigan Ave. and the whole city will be pulled up and replaced – but a city that is this green is certainly not wasteful. The bags of light bulbs will be given away free of charge at the Garfield Park Conservatory this Saturday at 8 .m. We're told they'll all be gone within 30 minutes, so get there early to have a chance. After the Tulip Brigade, prepare your green thumb from 11 .m to 4 .m clock at the 20th Annual Green & Growing Fair of the Conservatory, an urban garden festival sponsored by Chicagoland's GreenNet Coalition. Stations set up during the free festival will teach you how to build your own mini garden bed, make compost in the city and design a shared garden space. Organic seedlings, garden materials and more will be for sale – including the KOCHTERRITM pepper, a Breed of peppers created here Chicago. 365 Print 27.99 $0.00 / Boo!
